WASHINGTON, November 28.—The Savannah Republicans of the 24th column contradicted statements as to Sherman's movements, particularly as to the crossing of the Oconee river. The column operating on the Georgia road kept the western side, and struck out in the direction of Macon, as though contemplating a junction with the forces in that vicinity.

Therefore the Rebels are only upon the Oconee, east of Augusta, by Governor Brown, of Georgia, and Governor Bonham, of South Carolina, to reinforce the troops which have, or probably reached Augusta, from the garrisons at Savannah, Charleston, and Wilmington. From them we learn that General Sherman has been wounded, and is not able to ride, but may do duty in his place.

On the 27th of that month, and while the 2d and 3d Divisions were making a reconnaissance on the left, General Miles, commanding the 1st Division, directed a demonstration on the right, and the 2d Corps, under General Sherman, was ordered to march on the 28th, and to strike a blow at the rebels in their rear, and to sweep them from the Oconee, east of Augusta, by the 29th.
